

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Local Businesses Donate Free Green Heat to Community School

Lincoln, MA, January 19, 2011 – Two local heating companies are donating free green heat to the students at the Carroll School in Lincoln, MA.

WoodPellets.com, New England's leading wood pellet delivery provider, will donate and deliver a ton of wood pellets from a local distribution center, enough fuel to heat the school's yurt classroom for about a month. And Scott Williamson of Rehoboth-based PelletStoveService.com is providing a full-service cleaning and maintenance package for the school's pellet stove, the primary source of heat for the yurt classroom on campus.

"We're proud to help keep the students warm at Carroll," says WoodPellets.com president and CEO Jon Strimling. "The school has invested in green heat, and this is a learning opportunity for the students, a chance for them to learn about an efficient, sustainable, locally produced heating source." WoodPellets.com, he says, is committed to making clean, green heat available and affordable for the public.

Likewise, Williamson says he makes donations of his time and services to local schools and charities at least several times a year. "It's important to me that I give back to the community. Often times, you find that schools and other municipal buildings are quick to invest in a green heating system like a wood pellet stove, furnace, or boiler. I try to make the service and maintenance of their systems as easy as possible."

The Carroll School provides instruction to students diagnosed with language-based learning disabilities such as dyslexia. "By heating with wood pellets, the Carroll School is setting an example. The kids can learn about carbon-free heat, and the school community is part of the green movement – and saving money at the same time," says Strimling.

More information about heating with wood pellets can be found at www.woodpellets.com. To learn about pellet stove service and maintenance recommendations, or for a service quote, visit www.pelletstoveservice.com.

Contact:

Audrey Bourque, 603-263-2951

abourque@woodpellets.com